Michael Shank Racing

Driven by the competitive passion of Michael Shank, the team that bears his name has grown from a simple start to become a powerful force in North American motorsports. Now in its second decade of competition, Michael Shank Racing (MSR) was originally formed when a loose collection of friends and volunteers gathered together to help Shank pursue a driving career in regional club events. But it soon developed into a full-time racing operation with an impressive record of pole positions, podiums, race wins, and championship challenges in numerous professional and amateur series.

Today, Michael Shank Racing campaigns two Daytona Prototype entries in the highly competitive Rolex Sports Car Series. The team opened up 2006 by very nearly capturing its biggest prize, taking second place in the Rolex 24 At Daytona. The Columbus, Ohio based team broke through in the final race of the 2006 season as Oswaldo Negri and Mark Patterson teamed to take a victory in the nine hour season finale at Miller Motorsports Park.

With rules that reward hard work and clever solutions, over merely competing with a large budget, the Rolex Sports Car Series has proven to be an ideal competitive environment for Michael Shank Racing, and is one that the team plans to be a part of for years to come.
